THE BUCKET LIST by April Hutchinson

Each issue, we round up a few "bucket list" ideas that really are once-in-a-lifetime experiences

STAY ON A PRIVATE ISLAND It's surely everyone's dream to stay on a private island and live a Bond-like fantasy. Of course, one of the most famed options for this kind of lifestyle is Richard Branson's Necker Island, which is gradually working its way back to full speed. The island is still available for exclusive hire in its six Bali Houses and Temple House. Most recently, its tennis pavilion has made way for an even more spacious two-storey beach house, including dining table for 40 guests (neckerisland.virgin.com).

GO TO ANTARCTICA Visiting the furthest polar regions of the planet must also be high on many a bucket list – even more so after David Attenborough's Frozen Planet TV series last year. In 2012, clients might like the idea of seeing this incredible part of the planet in the company of Abercrombie & Kent founder Geoffrey Kent. He'll be onboard Le Boreal on an A&K 50th anniversary special, departing November 27 until December 10 (abercrombiekent.co.uk).

SEE WHALES IN THE WILD Sri Lanka is fast becoming known as one of the top locations in the world for spotting blue whales and sperm whales – and, according to Ampersand, it's the best place on the planet for seeing them together. Trincomalee, on the east coast, is still relatively unknown and home to the fifth largest natural harbour. It is becoming a hotspot for whale and dolphin watching – while there, suggest whalewatchers stay in Chaaya Blu, a stylish little beach hotel (ampersandtravel.com).
